The Instructions

In order to make the most of Humanities Unbound, let's play a series of games together! Throughout the conference, you will use the following tasks to generate points, as well as interact with fellow participants. Keep a tracking sheet of your accomplishments for your own records (a Google doc is fine).

In the end, the player with the most points wins a prize: Friendship! Not good enough? All right, we can appreciate your materialistic nature. How about an iPad mini?

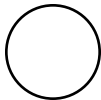

Be sure to record all of your activity. At the end of the conference, submit your points: bit.ly/HUODU2015

Then tweet a picture of your booklet with the conference hashtag: #HUODU2015.

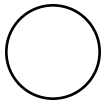

Have fun!

The Participation Quest

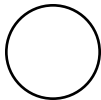

A good conference is one in which participants are actively engaged in all aspects of the conference, not just their brief presentation. You may receive a point for each activity below. All of these are valid only when stamped.

Attend the morning workshop!

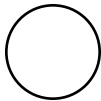

Volunteer (clean up, do registration, tech support, Twitter moderator for keynote)! Indicate role on your tracking sheet.

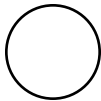

Attend the keynote speakers' presentation!

The Networking Quest

There are no limits on how many times you do each of these activities. You must record each and tally your points. They are each worth one point.

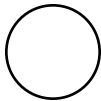

Tweet the conference! Record each of your tweets below. Be sure to include the conference hashtag #HUODU2015. Tally each time you do on your tracking sheet.

Take a screenshot with someone from the conference you just met. Tweet this image with the conference hashtag. Record that person's Twitter handle or email address on your tracking sheet.

For the below tasks, you may get one point for each person who signs.

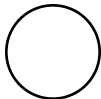

Share the conference link with a friend who is not presenting; they must log in online for an entire workshop or panel. Note the friend's name on your tracking sheet.

The Presentation Quest

You will receive a point for each of the following items. You may get multiple points if the item occurs multiple times. You must keep track of your points, marking that it has occurred.

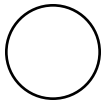

Present! Fill in your moderator's name on your tracking sheet.

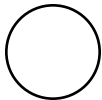

Someone asks you a question about your presentation. Fill in that person's name on your tracking sheet.

You ask someone on your panel a question about their presentation. Fill in that person's name on your tracking sheet.

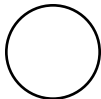

As an audience member not on a panel, you ask someone a question about their presentation. Fill in that person's name on your tracking sheet.

The Creativity Quest

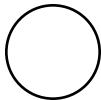

Scholarship often requires a bit of imagination. Each activity below is worth one point. You may earn multiple points when meme-making (each meme Tweeted is worth 1 point), but only one opportunity to guess the word-count for each dissertation.

Meme the conference! Take a picture during the conference and make a meme of it. Malicious memes will not count. Tweet the picture, using #HUODU2015. Mark on your tracking sheet for each meme you make.

Swag your selfie! Snap a pic during the conference, and make it look fancy--be sure to tell us what digital tool(s) you used to create your masterpiece when you tweet it or post it to Facebook using #HUODU2105.

Guess the wordcount of the dissertation (see Facebook for pictures)! Mark your guess on your tracking sheet. Closest answer wins the point!

Unbinding the Humanities Quest

We want to hear from you! Help us make next year's conference even better by giving us feedback or volunteering to help.

Support next year's Humanities Unbound! Earn a point for each suggestion on ways to build our next conference, from next year's theme, evolving the game, or speakers you'd like to invite.

Volunteer to join next year's Humanities Unbound Planning Committee! Indicate the type of support or input you'd be interested in offering (or instance, helping with the game, distance tech, marketing, planning, speakers, moderators, or just jack-of-all trades). Earn a point.
